December 9-13, 2009

6 Nights / 5 Days, Unit 11 Hunts

This outfitter is located in Southeast Kansas farm country. Miles of corn, soybeans, milo, wheat, and alfalfa fields provide year-round food sources to produce some of the biggest bucks and highest quality deer herds in the country. Supplemental feeding is also done during key times to put deer near stand locations. Hunting is done only on private owned and managed farms from both quality ground blinds and tree stands in timber blocks and along creek and river bottoms. Agriculture field edges are also prime set-ups to catch mature bucks feeding and traveling. Spending a long day in the stand is your best bet to having a trophy-class buck to move your way. Some of our best bucks are taken around mid-day, so staying alert can pay off.

The rifle season usually catches the tail end of the first rut and usually includes the best part of the secondary rutting activity. Many big bucks are taken during the rifle season with longer shots able to be made. Colder weather is also sure to have the deer moving more in search of food.
